

Neil Barbour

Graduating from Edinburgh University with a MA (Hons) in Social Policy with Social and Political Studies, which also involved also some law courses, Neil very much enjoyed these subjects and associated research. The courses followed so far have laid the foundations for a career in policy development and implementation.

From his extensive voluntary experience, Neil has a good understanding of disability issues and the policy responses designed to help. His return to university and subsequent degree choice was governed by his interest in disability issues.

In his spare time Neil is a keen rugby enthusiast and has a keen interest in Dramatics, having worked for several amateur dramatic societies, performing at the Fringe Festival for many years, and enjoy spending the occasional evening at the theatre.